

Bird Watching Curaçao

2nd Updated bird
checklist Curaçao
September 8, 2023

Colofon

This checklist is produced by Bird Watching Curaçao, a group of bird watchers on the island of Curaçao dedicated to bird monitoring, education and information.

This list has been produced to assist visiting birders and local birders with an updated bird checklist of the island including both breeding birds, migratory birds and incidental bird visitors recorded.

The list includes scientific names and names in English and Dutch and is based on historical records combined with new records collected on ebird.org.

Changes in this second edition

The first bird checklist for birding purposes was produced by the Bird Watching Curaçao team in May 2022. Since then this document was downloaded from our website over 600 times.

Local birders on the island are on the lookout for new observations almost every day and continue to find new visitors almost every year. In the months since publishing the first edition of the bird checklist of Curaçao 3 new species have been added, of which one is a first wanderer from South America; The Pied Lapwing.

The other 3 species of 'new' birds on the list are Agapornis parrots, most likely to be escapees seen wandering in the wild. Often the fate of these brightly coloured birds are grim, as they can easily be grabbed by local birds of prey such as the American kestrel.

Besides additions to the list, one species was removed from the bird list of the island based on reviews from birding experts. That is why the Eurasian Collared-Dove (Streptopelia decaocto) is no longer on the species list.

There are also numerous changes in scientific names of certain birds based on ongoing discussions and research by ornithologists in which DNA results provide new insights. One of the most conspicuous is the change of the scientific name of the local Crested Caracara back to Caracara plancus after it was changed from plancus to Caracara cheriway a couple of years ago.

These are the birds with an updated scientific name:

- Orinoco goose - Oressochen jubatus
- Blue-winged teal - Spatula discors
- Green winged teal - Anas crecca
- Leach's Storm-Petrel - Hydrobates leucorhous
- Neotropic Cormorant - Nannopterum brasilianum
- Crested Caracara - Caracara plancus
- Yellow-headed Caracara - Daptrius chimachima
